SUFFOLK COUNTY COMMUNITY COLLEGE PRESENTS SIMULTANEITY ON THE AMMERMAN CAMPUS IN SELDEN THROUGH OCTOBER 6, 2013

Selden, NY – The Maurice N. Flecker Gallery on the Ammerman Campus of Suffolk County Community College in Selden will host Simultaneity curated by Gabriel Phipps through October 6, 2013.

The artists in this exhibit collectively define simultaneity as a viewing experience rich in associations and visual phenomena – a pool of conflicting sources and viewpoints that only make sense together in a fictional world. Peculiar and often tense combinations include subjects seen from multiple perspectives; forms that function as windows; objects whose scale vacillates between human-size and the infinite; paint that describes pictorial space while asserting itself in literal space; forms that are at once synthetic and organic, solid and ephemeral, static and kinetic.

The artists herein approach the pictorial notion of simultaneous experience by way of shared and individual roads. Each painter owes a certain debt to cubism and builds on that institution. Emphasizing paint's materiality, Dannielle Tegeder creates illusionistic images that highlight artifice. Drawing on Pop and Modernist traditions, Steve McCall manipulates scale with forms that are both figurative and landscape-based. Through the use of intuitive and intellectual processes, Nick Lamia constructs what appear to be naturally occurring machines. Meghan Brady employs flat, volumetric forms to create images that are landscapes and pure abstraction. Gabriel Phipps makes solid, freestanding structures that verge on collapse, while referencing pink flesh, metal shards and glowing television screens with those same tenuous structures.

Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday from 12:00 p.m. until 3:00 p.m.. For additional information, please call 631-451-4093.
